

TREED BY THREE BUCKS.

Pennsylvania Lumberman Held Captive for Five Hours.

Trede by three buck deer after a desperate battle, George Gross, a lumberman employed by the Beecher Lumber Company, was held prisoner yesterday for five hours in the slender branches of a stunted maple tree near Marble Hollow Landing. His hands and feet were frozen. He will probably die as the result of exposure, and if he should recover he will lose both feet.

Gross was leading rough wood props yesterday at Weasel Hill, and after completing his task shouldered his pack hook and started for Marble Landing, four miles away. To shorten his route he struck through the woods near Smokehouse Hollow, a region rarely traversed because of the density of the underbrush. In the thicket Gross heard a snort, and an instant later saw the antlers of an old buck coming toward him. Before he could escape he was hauled headlong, a prong of one antler penetrating his left thigh.

Regaining his feet he began a desperate battle for life, using a cant hook, his only weapon. He had scarcely begun to fight when two other bucks bounded toward him. He ran for the nearest shelter. It was a small maple, and in through which he waded sprang into the lower limb, carrying him back with him. But the bucks were again upon him, and he was forced to beat them off as best he could as he climbed further up the tree.

Out of reach of the antlers of the vicious bucks, Gross was confronted by a new pair of hunters, a dozen men.

The bucks remained at the foot of the tree, snorting and charging at its trunk, making escape impossible. Gross felt his legs growing numb, and his hands scarcely able to clutch the slender limbs. He began to cry for help, shouting for over an hour, when he became exhausted. He crawled to the mouth of a hollow of the branch, as he felt that he could hold out only a short time longer. He began to shout again, and after a long time lumbermen in the woods some distance away heard his cries and began a search.

The bucks were driven off by John Bittner and several companions—Altoona Correspondent Chicago Inter-Ocean.
